

Texas: Fort Worth firefighters save people from fire that burnt church building

Posted by Sumit | November 27, 2019

Early Wednesday in Fort Worth, Firefighters rescued several people from a burning church building.

À

The incident took place at 3 a.m. in a vacant building at the South Fort Worth Baptist Church in the 800 blocks of W Fogg St.

À

According to reports from the Firefighters six homeless people were inside the building and had built up the fire to beat the cold. But all of a sudden, fire spread uncontrollably. Five of them were trapped inside the church and one was able to get out and respond to firefighters where the others were stuck.

À

Firefighters immediately responded to the call and used their ladder to get inside and save people.

À

No injuries from this incident have been reported so far.

Though the fire department said the things inside the building were burnt due to the fire, the external structure seems okay.