Texas and Louisiana are the leading nations in reported flu cases this season.

According to reports from the Centers for Disease Control, Texas reported more than 4,300 cases of flu this season and this number is second only to the bayou state.

Further reports from the sources state that Texas has the highest percentage of uninsured people and more than 18 % of Texas residents are staying without any health insurance.

The Centers for Disease Control reported that a flu vaccine is still effective because the flu season might come into next year.
